

SAVE THE DATE

Washington State Minority and Justice Commission's

Courts Igniting Change

Reconnecting Youth from the Courtroom to the Classroom

Much national and local attention has been given to what has been coined the "School to Prison Pipeline." The focus of this conference is on the courts' role in this phenomenon. Courts can play an important role in redirecting and reconnecting court involved youth to education and social supports in their communities.

But they cannot do it alone. This conference provides an opportunity for all of the stakeholders to explore and develop collaborative solutions to improve educational outcomes for youth of color who are involved in or at risk of becoming involved in the juvenile justice system.

Mark your Calendar for

OCTOBER 10, 2014

8:30am – 4:30pm

at Seattle University, Le Roux Conference Room

Sponsored by: The Minority and Justice Commission, Seattle Journal for Social Justice, TeamChild, Korematsu Center for Law and Equality, Washington State Partnership Council on Juvenile Justice, and the Center for Children & Youth Justice

To Register, Please Contact:

Cynthia Delostrinos, Cynthia.delostrinos@courts.wa.gov